

JAC! (Jose, Alex, and Celeste)

Deiro's Framework for Building Positive Relationships places an emphasis on creating one-to-one time with students. Our experiences building one-to-one relationships with students fostered trust and helped the students to be motivated.

In our experience, we've found that it is helpful to:

- Have conversations with students about what interests them*
- Show genuine interest and enthusiasm in the students life outside of school*
- Take time outside of class (lunchtime, recess, etc.) to connect with students on an individual level*
- Share your interests and passions with students to create a more meaningful relationship*
- Find resources/materials that connect learning experiences with student interests*
